SENATOR YOUNG TO SPEAK AT GUILD

"Christianity and Politics" will be the subject of a talk to be given by Senator Howard W. Young at a meeting of the Women's Community Guild of the Mattapoisett Congregational Church to be held Tuesday afternoon, January 10th, in the parish hall. Mrs. Walter Clark will lead the devotions and Mrs. John Denham, Jr. will be the hostess. The meeting will be conducted by the president, Mrs. Albert D. Furnans.

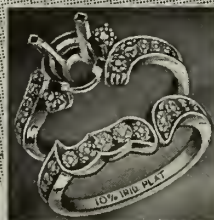

EXHIBITION PLANNED FOR HISTORICAL SOCIETY

A new and different exhibition is now in the forming stages for the Mattapoisett Historical Society and promises to be an interesting one. Like all of the exhibits which have been presented, this one depends on the active cooperation of the people of the area. Matta-poisett, Marion and Rochester residents are invited to participate by loaning the Historical Society material pertaining to this country's military history. Items loaned will be carefully catalogued and placed on display with such historical notes as can be furnished with them. All conflicts are to be covered from the Revolution, War of 1812, Civil War, Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II and the Korean War. Any pictures, medals, maps and guns made or manufactured during these periods are wanted and owners are asked to contact any member of the committee. If the items have a history to them it will make them all the more interesting. The response in the previous exhibits has been wonderful, and the items loaned were seen and enjoyed by townspeople and visitors. This is a new type of historical exhibit and it is hoped that items will turn up that have never before been placed on exhibition. The display probably will be scheduled for the latter part of February. Those having items to loan are asked to contact the committee now in order that they may be catalogued and placed on display. During the exhibition Mr. Earle Wilson will show slides of World War I scenes. The committee chairman is Anthony DeCosta and working with him are Earle Wilson, Kenneth Wood, Winfield Jenney, John Field, Floyd Tinkham, Ralph Dunn and Raymond Winslow.

information on new equipment and new service methods. Many servicemen attend each year along with salesmen, plumbers, electricians and others interested in better oil heating.

The students chose the subjects to be covered. This year's school includes pumps, transformers, boilers, oil burners — both high and low pressure, furnaces, nozzles, special heads and controls. None of the participating companies try to influence the students on their product but present their story from a purely service standpoint. Training men to give better service is the prime objective of this school. There is a nominal charge for the course which includes a valu-

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS ARE JUDGED

The annual Christmas decorations which have grown into a town wide display in Mattapoisett were judged this week. Certificates were won by Mr. Leo Lariviere of Church Street who won first prize in the residential class; Antone Silveira, Marion Road, second and Ed-ford Seeley, Pine Island Road, third. Honorable mention in the residential class went to the home of Lawrence C. Young of Perry Avenue for the most original lighting and to John Murphy of Linhares Avenue for special effects.

Winner in the business display group was

COLLEGE COMMITTEE SPONSORS PARTY FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

An informal party, "Holiday Mixer", was held last Wednesday evening in the parish hall of the Mattapoisett Congregational Church, sponsored by the College Committee of the church. Guests were the young people from the town who were at home for the holidays from college or on leave from the service.

The hall was decorated with Christmas trees trimmed with candy canes. Card tables, with candle centerpieces, were arranged around the hall. Guests enjoyed card games, bowling, darts, shuffleboard and dancing to recorded music played by James MacLauchlin.

Door prizes were awarded to Dexter Eldridge, William Titcomb, Albert Goodwin, Joyce Harri- man, Diana Pierce and Nancy Davis. Greeting the guests were Beverly Turner, Joyce Harri- man, Allan Taylor and Jeffrey Lewis.

THE FAILURES

The beginning of a new year has a definite effect on the spirit. There is a certain lift of optimism and adventure about any new undertaking, and a new year is a fresh slate.
Those who really want some encouragement should read about the successful men of the past. Almost every success was born of many failures. The tough human spirit has a marvelous bounce.

In the early 1900's, a man named Dan O'Sullivan reached a valley in his life. He lost his job and times were tough. He needed shoes but he had no money for new ones or even for repair of his old ones. So he patched his shoes with pieces of rubber. He found that the rubber gave his step a comfort that he had never before felt. Carrying the idea a little further, he came up with patented rubber heels and became a rich man practically overnight.

There was a three time failure, Solyman Brown, a minister, who became discouraged.
He turned to teaching school. This didn't pan out so he returned to preaching. Then finally he organized a new profession, dentistry.

John Hyatt searched for a synthetic substance to replace the expensive ivory in the manufacture of billiard balls. He accidentally discovered celluloid which opened up whole new industries as its uses grew and made Hyatt accidentally rich.

The inventors are the real failures. One of them, Thomas A. Edison, failed in thousands of experiments but when he finally succeeded he had the phonograph, long distance telephone, incandescent electric light, megaphone, system of quadruplex and sextuplex telegraphy and moving pictures as only a few of his successes. He worked 18 and 19 hours per day and spent vast sums of his money on further research. He said, "genius is 2 per cent inspiration and 98 per cent perspiration."

Another man struggled for most of his life to win recognition as a painter and failed. At 41 years of age he started in a new field and invented the telegraph. This man was Samuel F. B. Morse.

The examples are endless. All you have to do is pick a successful man and then go back and study his beginnings to find his failures and struggles. We have a new year and a new decade ahead and the slate is clean. We'll have ups and downs and may the good Lord help us to have the imagination and courage to seize our opportunities as they arise. This is it - 1961.

LIVING WITH YOUR HEART

The doctor's ability to raise your blood pressure is one of his major medical weapons.

This is particularly true in emergency treatment during anesthesia and surgery, after the loss of blood, in heart attacks, and several other conditions in which drastically low blood pressure may occur.

A search to track down the site in the body at which several major drugs function to raise blood pressure is under way, with Heart Fund aid, at New England Center Hospital. The study is directed by Dr. Benjamin E. Etsten, anes-thetist-in-chief at the hospital and professor of anesthesia at Tufts University School of Medicine; and Dr. Tsung Han-Li, assistant professor in anesthesia at Tufts.

At least ten agents being used to force sudden, drastic increase in blood pressures are being scrutinized under controlled conditions to learn the location at which they go to work, their relative potency, and their general effectiveness.

The information may serve as a basis for future selection of specific pressor drugs for the treatment of low blood pressure arising from a number of causes. Effects of the drugs on patients without apparent heart or lung involvement will be analyzed prior to surgery.

Among the factors to be analyzed will be heart output, blood vessel resistance and others.

Some of the vasopressor drugs work principally to increase the action of the heart, this raising the "head" of blood pressure.
Others work to squeeze the peripheral blood vessels, getting the same effect in a different fashion.

If the blood pressure drop is due to a depressing factor in the heart itself, it should be raised by increasing the heart's function rather than by giving a drug that constricts the peripheral vessels and throws an added load on an already over-burdened cardiac muscle.

Conversely, in cases where the drop is not due to heart damage, it is important to administer a drug that acts mainly on the peripheral vessels.

The study is designed to remove the element of chance from emergency situations in which a quick rise in blood pressure is imperative.

It is an interesting example of the kind of research that seldom receives wide-spread public notice, because of its basic nature-- but research that may save uncounted lives.

A MATTAPOISETT HISTORY
by Alice Loring Meigs written June 20, 1898

If you will go back with me two centuries and more, I shall endeavor to tell you whence Mattapoissett came, and carefully following its history, trace it to where it is and in the review describe as well as possible what it is. As in the beginning, religion has had an influence in founding of many colonies, so this factor appears in the granting of the land at Sippican by the Colonial Court at Plymouth to a committee of the Church at Scituate for the seating of a "township and congregation in 1638". The territory remained unoccupied until 1651, when it was granted to the town of Plymouth and probably purchased from the native Indians the same year. Several other purchases were made, and the town of Rochester, of which this village was then a part, was incorporated in 1685, and took its name from the ancient city of Rochester, England, whence many of the first planters of Scituate, founders of the town, emigrated. The first settlers appear to have come in 1680. The names of many of them remain among us at the present time, the Barlowes, Hammonds, Haskells, Holmeses those who start for the sake of freedom of thought to found a new nation, the settlers of Sippican pushed farther westward and founded the hamlet of Mattapoissett. The only meetinghouse was then at Sippican, and being so remote, the settlers asked to have one of their own, thus forming another parish, which they named Mattapoissett, meaning a place of rest, and so called from the name of the old camping grounds of the Indians, who rested here in their journeyings from the Narragansetts to the Plymouth Colony.

Passing rapidly over the time until 1775, we find the news of the battle of Lexington and Concord has just reached here. This town has ever been patriotic, and as soon as the report was made known the men at work upon the "Old Manse", then just framed, exchanged their implements for weapons, and went off to war. The house was not completed until after the cessation of hostilities. The War of 1812 was not without our volunteers.

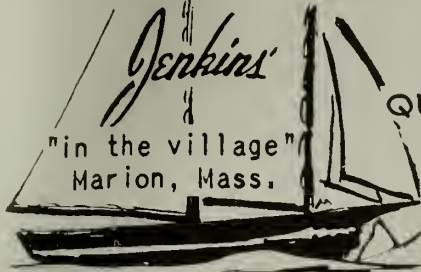

From this time until 1878, we find the town busily engaged in the manufacture of salt, and in whaling and shipbuilding, the latter being of the greater importance.

Speaking of shipbuilding recalls to one's mind the aspect of the lower street. From the old blacksmith shop, now "The Sands", thence along the shore to the summer residence of Mrs. Barnard, were shipyards, blacksmith and cooper shops, bakeries and rigging and sail lofts. Many and strong were the vessels built, rigged and manned there. Then was the town stirred with the busy hum of industry.

At that time on the island west of the creek were salt works and in the entire western part of the town. If one were out in the harbor and chanced to look toward the town it appeared very interesting, with its partly finished vessels and the numerous roofs over the salt work cranes, which resembled small houses closely nestled together.

In 1849 many left us for the gold fields of California. Also, in the same year, the railroad was chartered by an act of the legislature, and during 1850 the survey was made. In 1854 the first train came down bringing men to the big fire, which destroyed Eaton Hall, the Plymouth County House and several other buildings.

The year '57 was a double milestone in the history of our town, first in the incorporation as a separate town, and secondly in the great financial crisis which swept over the whole country, especially injuring the whaling and shipbuilding interests here.

In the rebellion of '61 the call of arms for the preservation of the Union was nobly responded to for all branches of the service. The town furnished more than her full quote as demanded by the government, and voted money for bounties and the encouragement of enlistments. Besides, nearly all the whaling ships were used for the "stone fleet" in blockading southern ports.

These last two occurrences, the crisis and the rebellion, passed as a blight over the town, until in '68 the beauties of the place presented themselves to the eyes of capitalists, who invested, sounded its praises and made it a summer resort. Notwithstanding its advantages for shipbuilding, the depression in the whaling business due to the discovery of mineral oil in Pennsylvania cut off the demand for vessels and the last of is no remnant, yet the influx of strangers causes a moderate activity in trade.

The several new buildings that have been erected within the past few years show that we are still alive to public interests. The building we are now seated in shows material evidence of this. The gift of a new school building has grandly supplemented the educational facilities of the town, which for a long time included the "Barstow School", founded in 1870 by the munificent bounty of Captain Z. M. Barstow, and from which we now are about to sever our connections as pupils forever.

Thus in this brief summary of more than two hundred years, we have traced the origin and development, the business rise and decline and the final conversion into a summer resort of our native place.

ICE BOAT SEEN ON MATTAPOISETT RIVER

An ice boat was seen sailing the Herring River in Mattapoisett on Monday. In recent years the ice boats have had little opportunity to operate. There once was a time when the freezing of the harbor was a common occurrence and then the ice boats had the wide sweep of clear ice that they need to reach their great speed. The boat running up the narrow river and shielded by the trees on the bank may not furnish the most thrilling ride in the world, but it certainly indicates that the will will make a way when the ice won't cooperate.
